My name is Jane. Last Saturday, my brother and I were having a picnic in the country when a beautiful

(1) butterfly flew over our heads.

‘Look!’ my brother said. ‘It’s got white (2)!’

Are they endangered, Jane?’

‘I don’t know,’ I answered. ‘We (3) look on the Internet at home. We shouldn’t try to catch it, but when it stops on a flower, we can look at it more carefully.’

It had got white wings and there were a few little black (4) There was a darker stripe at the top of each wing, too. I (5) a photo of it on my phone.

That evening, we found its name on the computer. The butterfly we saw in the woods was called a ‘Small White’.

I’m going to find out about other butterflies now. I think they’re the most beautiful insects in the world!
